This book contains complete descriptions of conscience and sadism, which are the cause of most justice and injustice, respectively. Conscience and sadism are described in terms of general conceptions, behaviors, facial and vocal expressions, related physical traits, political positions, physical neuroelectrical traits, neurological traits, and genetic traits. Also included is a large amount of general neurological and psychoneurological information, and cosmological information that is related to the fundamental physical nature of conscience and sadism. This book also describes applications of the psychological and neurological information and a sociopolitical strategy by which to implement their use and to maximize justice as well as types of pleasure that are inherently virtuous.
